Modern Medicine and Life-World

Mikiei KURIOKA

T.Parsons discussed about doctor-patient relations in his “Social Systems” and other works. He assumed between them one of mutual “trust”. I think modern medicine has been lost grounds of such a relations. The developments of medical treatments threaten the relations of mutual trust. I will discuss that recently medicine has become a social system which J.Habermas contrasted to Life-world. E.G.Mishler and G.Scambler discussed about the relationship of medical systems and Life-world of patients. Their arguments are interesting and useful for more discussions. In this paper I will understand the medicine as social system and explain that patients depart from his Life-world and meet the medical system.
