On Shi-shu (史書)

Tetsuji ATSUJI

We can find several expressions about Shi-shu in the documents of Han dynasty. Some scholars have supposed that was the ancient style of penmanship which was called Zhou-shu 籀書, and the others supposed that was nothing but the common style which was called Li-shu 隸書.

As is well-known, the most ordinary style of penmanship was Li-shu in those days. I think it is impossible that the most ordinary Li-shu was also called Shi-shu at the same time, while Shi-shu was used on some particular cases. I suppose it was one of the conditions to enter the government service, and would like to present my preliminary finding here.
